DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(c) as being anticipated by Farwell et al. (6,792,964). Farwell discloses, in figs. 2, 4 and 5, a pressure relief apparatus comprising a rupture disc having a central portion 15 and a peripheral flange 13, a rupturable line of weakness (10, 22, 32) having opposed end regions in space relationship that defines a hinge portion (23, 34), the end regions of the line of weakness converging toward one another, and then diverging away from one another as the outermost terminal ends of the end regions of the line of weakness are approached.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 7-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Farwell et al. in view of DeGood et al (5,512,491).

Farwell et al. do not disclose the line of weakness being defined a series of elongated, end-to-end spaced slits and a pair of said rupture discs.

DeGood et al. teach a pressure relief apparatus comprising line of weakness being defined a series of elongated, end-to-end spaced slits and a pair of rupture discs.

Therefore it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the line of weakness in Farwell being defined a series of elongated, end-to-end spaced slits and a pair of said rupture discs, as taught by DeGood et al, in or to facilitate the rupture of the rupture disc. And it also obvious to make provide a pair of the rupture discs in the Fawell pressure relief apparatus, as taught by DeGood et al., in order to use with an application of a strong force of at least a predetermined magnitude of the central section of the disc.

In regard to claims 9 and 10, the slits of the end regions of the line of weakness are lesser the length than the slits of the remainder of the line of weakness, which would be obvious to one skilled in the art for applying shorter slits in the sort end groins.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 13-25 are allowed.
